CVs for High Flyers

The definitive career guide for grad students, adjuncts, post-docs and anyone else eager to get tenure or turn their Ph.D. into their ideal job Each year tens of thousands of students will, after years of hard work and enormous amounts of money, earn their Ph.D. And each year only a small percentage of them will land a job that justifies and rewards their investment. For every comfortably tenured professor or well-paid former academic, there are countless underpaid and overworked adjuncts, and many more who simply give up in frustration. Those who do make it share an important asset that separates them from the pack: they have a plan. They understand exactly what they need to do to set themselves up for success. They know what really moves the needle in academic job searches, how to avoid the all-too-common mistakes that sink so many of their peers, and how to decide when to point their Ph.D. toward other, non-academic options. Karen Kelsky has made it her mission to help readers join the select few who get the most out of their Ph.D. As a former tenured professor and department head who oversaw numerous academic job searches, she knows from experience exactly what gets an academic applicant a job. And as the creator of the popular and widely respected advice site The Professor is In, she has helped countless Ph.D.'s turn themselves into stronger applicants and land their dream careers. Now, for the first time ever, Karen has poured all her best advice into a single handy guide that addresses the most important issues facing any Ph.D., including: -When, where, and what to

The ideal graduation gift for anyone about to enter the workforce, a witty, practical guide to 200 difficult professional conversations—featuring all-new advice from the creator of the popular website Ask a Manager and New York’s work-advice columnist. There’s a reason Alison Green has been called “the Dear Abby of the work world.” Ten years as a workplace-advice columnist have taught her that people avoid awkward conversations in the office because they simply don’t know what to say. Thankfully, Green does—and in this incredibly helpful book, she tackles the tough discussions you may need to have during your career. You’ll learn what to say when

- coworkers push their work on you—then take credit for it
- you accidentally trash-talk someone in an email then hit “reply all”
- you’re being micromanaged—or not being managed at all
- you catch a colleague in a lie
- your boss seems unhappy with your work
- your cubemate’s loud speakerphone is making you homicidal
- you got drunk at the holiday party

Advance praise for Ask a Manager “A must-read for anyone who works . . . [Alison Green’s] advice boils down to the idea that you should be professional (even when others are not) and that communicating in a straightforward manner with candor and kindness will

The New Rules of Work

Since the financial crisis of 2007, jobs have been and still are extremely hard to get. The financial crisis effectively wiped out the middle class, so there are less jobs for university graduates and high school graduates, as well as everybody who is trying to get back into the work force. And to top it all off businesses are closing down in record numbers. And that means business owners and their employees are back in the workforce. So the competition for each job has just heated up. And there are less jobs being advertised. That means more people are applying for each job. All hoping beyond hope they will get the job. Now you can give yourself the edge with an online CV. When your future employer sees your CV, you have possibly less than 30 seconds to impress, or delete. You are competing against the dreaded delete button, as well as everybody else who applied. Your CV has to be more eye catching, better set up and contain what your prospective employer needs to know, just to evade the dreaded delete button. When you send in your CV you usually hear nothing back. But with an online CV tailored to match the job you are applying for, things could be very different. Your CV is the first contact between you and your prospective employer. It has been said 'first impressions mean a lot' so make your first impression memorable with a hand made online CV. Also if you have a page counter on your CV you can see how many times your CV has been looked at. Now to get your future employer to notice you. You need a CV that will make you stand out above the crowd. And an online CV, that you put together yourself, will give you that extra edge to get the job you want. And you need the edge, as you are competing with a ton of people all trying to get the same job you want, as well as the dreaded delete button. No website, doesn't matter. There are many free websites you can choose from. So you can have an online CV even if you haven't got a website. Nowadays you can do some amazing things with free websites, and you don't need any skills to set them up. In the book we use a number of free websites that are very easy to use. The learning curve doesn't take too long to master. Now how do you set up an online CV? Well this little book will show you how. It goes through which FREE programs to use and how to use the programs. So anybody with limited internet skills will be able to put together an online CV, as well as a video presentation. And you could be on the way to write a book to add value to what you can put on your CV. The unusual all helps when you are going for a job in a depressed job market. There are many different little bits and pieces that you can do to add more meaning to your CV. It doesn't take much to upgrade a boring old CV. Also with the book, there is a link to an online video, that has been put together using the free software mentioned in the book. The video walks you through, on screen, how to use the software. So even if your computer skills need upgrading, you can still throw together a very decent online CV with a video. Since the internet has invaded our lives it has somehow managed to change what we do and how we do it, in a very short time. There are still jobs advertised in the newspapers, but there are more jobs advertised online on the internet. When you apply for a job advertised in the newspaper, do you send in a traditional CV or do you apply online. And if you apply online, how do you apply. At present online CVs do not seem to be the rage. And a CV copy pasted to an email, does not look very good. So what do you do? You can have a CV online so anybody can access it. When your CV is online you can tweak it to suit the job you are going for, and it is very easy to adjust and change, as your situation changes. The online world is the future, so making your CV available online is being part of the future.

Too often a design or architecture degree is seen as a means to an end (a job in an established practice). But imagine for one moment that there are no employers, no firms to send your resumé to, no interviews to be had—what would you do? How would you forge your own path after graduation? The current economic climate has seen many graduates chasing a finite number of positions. The most ingenious and driven designers have found weird and wonderful ways of making opportunities for themselves, often by applying their skills across the creative disciplines of art, design, architecture, and interiors. Knowing what you want from your design career and being able to adapt your strategy to suit is basic and vital—just like in the wild, designers need to evolve. The book celebrates the various strategies that students and graduates are taking to gain exposure, while also including interviews and inspirational advice from those who are now enjoying success as a result of their creative approach to employment.

Helen D. I hated my job, wanted out, and didn't know where to begin. I had a decision to make: I could continue on the track to working my 9-5 job in front of a desk and let it define me and make me miserable, or look for something different. J.T. showed me that it's not your job that defines you at all; it's you who defines your job. She worked with me to figure out my strengths and work on my weaknesses. J.T. helped me learn that who I am is far more than the paycheck I bring in. Through that exploration of my own real desires, J.T. helped me to realize that I needed a far more creative outlet to be successful in. I can truly say that without J.T.'s help, I certainly would not be where I am today. I'm more aware of my life and the people in it! absolutely love my job and really feel successful. I owe an immense amount of gratitude to J.T. for getting me to this place in my life. - Danielle H. The information in this book is so on target, I wish I'd found it earlier in my career.
